Measure Y Rebuttal:

Ask yourself why a group from San Jose with a single signer is telling Belmont voters how to spend Belmont's money. They don't live here, they're not offering solutions, and their claims about this measure aren't accurate.

They claim "everyone" will be forced to pay this tax. Untrue. Homeowners 65 and older who own and live in their homes can apply for an exemption.

They mock the need for a disaster relief and emergency preparedness center in Belmont. Wildfires, earthquakes, floods, and power outages are realities we face here, and today we have no reliable place to turn when they happen.

They question why a new community center isn't already in the city budget. The existing city budget can't replace a failing 75-year-old building, and residents chose to act. The City Council didn't put this funding measure on the ballot, Belmont residents did as a citizens' initiative.

The new center serves every group: seniors, families, after-school programs, and community organizations. Parks and libraries serve everyone. Our community center does the same. Belmont residents proposed this measure because we live here and value our community. Every year of delay costs more and leaves us less prepared. The choice is ours.

Vote YES on Measure Y.
