IMPARTIAL ANALYSIS OF MEASURE "C"

The City Council placed Measure C on the ballot. Subject to voter approval, Measure C adds Chapter 3.42 to the Perris Municipal Code establishing a business license tax on "distribution facilities," "industrial businesses," and "truck yards," as defined.

The initial voter-authorized maximum tax rate is 10 cents per square foot of "taxable area" per fiscal year. The City Council may set the "operative rate" (i.e., the rate that will actually be charged) anywhere up to that maximum. If no initial operative rate is set, it defaults to 10 cents per square foot.

The ordinance generally defines:

- A "distribution facility" as premises principally used to receive, store, consolidate, handle, stage, transfer, or distribute goods for eventual delivery elsewhere.
- An "industrial business" as primarily indoor or outdoor manufacturing with regular "large-truck" activity; a "large truck" exceeds five tons gross weight.
- A "truck yard" as premises principally used to park, store, stage, or dispatch commercial trucks, trailers, chassis, or intermodal containers. Incidental commercial-vehicle parking subordinate to another business is excluded.

The tax equals the operative rate multiplied by "taxable area," meaning the combined gross floor and outdoor business area principally used in operating the business. Outdoor business area includes storage, staging, loading, handling, and truck parking areas. Circulation and fire lanes, stormwater facilities, and queuing, passenger vehicle parking, landscaping, and vacant or unused areas are excluded.

"E-commerce facilities," meaning facilities or areas principally used to fulfill online orders for direct consumer delivery, are exempt. At mixed-use facilities, only separately identifiable e-commerce areas are exempt. Businesses with 50,000 square feet or less of combined gross floor and outdoor business area are also exempt.

Beginning July 1, 2027, the voter-authorized maximum rate and operative rate automatically increase annually by the lesser of 3% or the annual increase in the Riverside-San Bernardino-Ontario Consumer Price Index (CPI). If the CPI does not increase, neither rate increases. Except for these automatic annual increases, any increase or reduction of the operative rate requires a four-fifths vote of the entire City Council.

Measure C is a general tax. Proceeds are available to be spent for any lawful municipal purpose. The City estimates $2,523,877 in annual revenue. Annual reporting and audit review are required.

The City Council may amend the ordinance but may not set the operative rate higher than the voter-authorized maximum rate or increase the voter-authorized maximum rate. Only voters may repeal the tax, which has no expiration date.

A "YES" vote on Measure C is a vote in favor of the general business license tax on "distribution facilities," "industrial businesses," and "truck yards."

A "NO" vote on Measure C is a vote against the general business license tax on "distribution facilities," "industrial businesses," and "truck yards."

ARGUMENT IN FAVOR OF MEASURE "C"

Vote YES on Measure C, the Perris Warehouse Tax Measure, to repair our streets, support public safety, and ensure warehouse businesses pay their fair share--all without raising taxes on Perris residents!

Perris's roads are in major need of repair. Independent engineers have determined that many local streets do not meet the City's standards, a problem worsened by heavy industrial truck use. Large commercial trucks take massive toll on our local infrastructure, causing potholes, ruts, and severe road damage. If we delay street repairs, it will be much more expensive to repair them later.

Measure C provides a fair and practical solution. Measure C does not increase taxes on residents or local small businesses. It establishes a business license tax of up to 10¢ per square foot of taxable area strictly on large industrial, warehouse, and manufacturing businesses with heavy truck activity, with annual adjustments capped at 3%.

By passing Measure C, Perris will generate approximately $2.5 million annually to fund our community's top priorities. This locally controlled funding can be used to:

- Repair streets, roads, and potholes
- Support public safety, including 911 emergency response
- Fix and maintain storm drains and sidewalks
- Synchronize traffic signals and improve pedestrian and traffic safety

Furthermore, Measure C includes strict, built-in accountability safeguards. It requires mandatory public disclosure of all spending and annual independent financial audits to ensure funds are used effectively. By law, every penny generated by Measure C must stay in Perris—it cannot be taken away by the State or County.

Protect our City's long-term financial stability and ensure warehouses pay their fair share for their impact on our community.

Vote NO on Measure C

Measure C is misleading. Supporters promise road repairs but omit a critical fact: Measure C is a general tax. Every dollar flows into Perris' General Fund, where it can fund any pet project. Audits disclose spending; they don't guarantee funds for potholes, streets, sidewalks, or traffic safety.

City Hall's crisis narrative deserves scrutiny. Perris declared a "fiscal emergency" while describing the action as "preventive and proactive," an invented label for a situation that hasn't occurred. City officials report a staggering $64+ million in reserves, exceeding 70% of the City's General Fund budget, more than twice the City's minimum-reserve requirement. Those facts don't justify another permanent tax.

Voters just approved Measure B, a one-cent sales tax increase expected to provide City Hall with $18 million annually. Measure C would add another tax on local employers before politicians show whether that new revenue solves the cited problems. It would hike taxes by 10 cents per square foot, increase with inflation each year, and continue forever.

Targeted businesses already pay property, sales, and business-license taxes and, depending on location, special assessments. They employ residents, buy locally, support families, and power Perris' economy. Tax supporters blame heavy trucks, yet the City's own study shows that trucks make up just 5.1% of all vehicles on local streets.

Perris doesn't need manufactured urgency, misleading promises, or another unrestricted revenue stream. Demand honest budgeting and responsible use of existing taxes. Protect local jobs and businesses.

ARGUMENT AGAINST MEASURE "C"

Vote NO on Measure C, Perris' latest tax scheme.

Perris residents and businesses are already struggling with affordability. City politicians keep making life in Perris more expensive.

Months ago, voters approved Measure B, a one-cent sales tax projected to generate about $18 million annually. Now, politicians want to single out many of Perris' local job centers for another costly tax.

The City's own data shows that Perris had $64.3 million in General Fund reserves as of June 30, 2025, representing about 72% of annual General Fund expenditures, more than double the City's 30% reserve policy. Yet the City Council declared a "fiscal emergency," which City staff described as "proactive."

Despite millions in the bank, Perris politicians shut the door on new warehouse development by imposing a warehouse moratorium and then declaring a "proactive" fiscal emergency they created through their policies. They now want to impose a new special tax on many of the same employers that provide local jobs and economic activity.

The proposed warehouse tax starts at up to 10 cents per square foot and can increase by up to 3% annually. At that rate, the tax could rise by more than 80% over 20 years, nearly doubling.

Politicians claim the tax funds infrastructure, but the money goes into the General Fund and cannot be legally restricted to road repairs. Targeting a single industry with a special tax is both unfair and poor economic policy.

Businesses do not absorb higher taxes indefinitely. Higher operating costs are passed along through higher prices, fewer jobs, reduced investment, and higher costs for local consumers.

Perris just increased your sales tax under Measure B. Perris businesses already pay sales, property, business-license, and special assessment taxes.

Enough is enough.

Protect Perris jobs. Protect local businesses.

Say No to Special Interests: The Facts on Measure C

The argument against Measure C wasn't written by a Perris local or small business owner. It came from an Orange County real estate lobbyist. Their goal is to protect huge corporate profits while making Perris taxpayers pay for the damage their businesses cause.

Here are the facts they don't want you to know:

Zero Sales Tax: Traditional warehouses pay absolutey zero sales tax to fund Perris city services. However, their massive trucks destroy our roads and rely heavily on local police and fire departments.

Ruined Roads: Perris has over 34 million square feet of industrial space. Heavy commercial trucks cause three times more damage to our streets than regular cars do.

No Tax on Residents: Despite corporate scare tactics, Measure C is strictly a business license tax on giant logistics centers larger than 50,000 square feet. It will not raise taxes on homeowners, residents, or local small businesses.

Money for Perris Services: This measure will generate $2.5 million every year to invest back into our community. It also guarantees transparency by requiring independent annual audits and public spending reports.

Big warehouse developers claim the city has enough savings to fix the roads their trucks ruin. We believe their profits should not come at our community's expense.

Stop giving free rides to multi-million dollar warehouse companies. Make these out-of-town corporations pay their fair share.
