Rebuttal to Argument Against Measure EE

The opposition argument misunderstands both how San Bruno's Business License Tax works today and what this measure actually does. This is not a "huge new tax hike." It is a long-overdue modernization of a tax structure written over a quarter century ago that no longer reflects today's economy, treats every business exactly the same regardless of impact, and charges lower marginal rates as businesses earn more. This outdated system leaves San Bruno far behind neighboring cities and unable to fund essential services.

This measure does not tax residents. It does not increase costs for homeowners renting rooms or ADUs. It does not tax affordable housing providers, who are exempt under state law. And it preserves the current low $75 base rate for small businesses.

The claim that businesses "don't pay taxes" ignores reality. Every city in San Mateo County has a Business License Tax or equivalent structure. San Bruno's is simply obsolete. Updating it ensures that large enterprises contribute fairly based on their gross receipts, while small businesses continue paying the lowest rate.

The opposition also suggests this measure will drive businesses away. But neighboring cities already use modern gross-receipts systems—many with higher rates—and continue to attract and retain employers. San Bruno cannot maintain rapid 911 response, fix streets, keep library and senior programs strong, or preserve parks and open space without stable revenue.

Vote YES on Measure EE to protect essential services and keep San Bruno strong.
