Rebuttal to Argument Against Measure ART

[redacted]

The City Council consolidated Measure ART with the 2026 California General Election. The City Council did not create a separate election solely for Measure ART.

The sole opponent to Measure ART admits that Measure ART increases zoning capacity, and that capacity is the catalyst for new restaurants, shops, gathering spaces, jobs, and rooftop dining that decades-old zoning blocked outright.

The sole opponent asks voters to wait until March 2027 for a "clearer" proposal. But, there is no other proposal contemplated. The truth is that Measure ART would be the same on either ballot: the product of years of public hearings, environmental review, and Council votes. Delay does not make it clearer. It only postpones revitalization of our commercial corridors that Redondo Beach has wanted for decades, and leaves the Council's already-approved 2024 land use decisions in limbo even longer.

The sole opponent also proposes splitting Measure ART into separate ballot questions. That means parsing the land use regulations surrounding the city's commercial corridors into potentially disjointed parts, with a real risk of fragmentation that arbitrarily approves some corridors while stalling others. Council's approach here was one coordinated update at this critical time for brick-and-mortar businesses.

Lastly, the sole opponent admits that Measure ART does not waive environmental review, coastal permitting, or Article XXVII's protections. Those safeguards to our residential neighborhoods remain in place. Every future project still faces appropriate scrutiny.

Measure ART reflects years of careful, coordinated work: real design standards, real limits, real accountability.

Redondo Beach has waited decades to revitalize Artesia Boulevard and Pacific Coast Highway. Vote YES on Measure ART.
