Measure ART asks voters to approve a land-use package in a $250,000 Special Municipal Election consolidated with November's statewide election, four months before Redondo Beach's March 2, 2027 municipal election. It is the City's only ballot measure. Proponents do not explain why ART could not wait.

ART follows years of planning and environmental analysis. That work deserves consideration, but planning is not a blank check. Extensive process cannot guarantee businesses, jobs or revenue, explain reduced housing density on some properties, or justify combining changes into one vote. Voters must evaluate ART's consequences, not approve it merely to "finish the job."

The proponents promise shops, restaurants, aerospace investment and increased revenue, yet acknowledge that no project exceeding current limits is proposed today. Zoning capacity is not construction. ART neither requires owners to build nor ensures projects will be feasible or completed. Design standards and environmental review do not convert predictions into guaranteed outcomes.

ART combines changes affecting Artesia and Aviation Boulevards, industrial properties, Pacific Coast Highway, and residential and mixed-use properties. Residents may support commercial changes on Artesia but oppose housing-density reductions elsewhere. ART permits only one all-or-nothing decision.

A NO vote does not reject revitalization or waste prior planning. It preserves existing rules while allowing the City to return with clearer and separated proposals. Local control includes exercising election authority prudently, transparently and economically. Voters deserve benefits, meaningful choices and a convincing explanation of costs, not predictions, momentum and unanimity. Vote NO on Measure ART.
